DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-5 and 10-14 are pending in the application.

Applicant's arguments filed with the most recent amendment were fully considered and found persuasive for the following reasons: It is clear that wound dressings such as wool and silk bandages were known in the art at the time the Instant invention was made. It is also deemed that if wool and/or silk dressings are applied to a wound site, that these dressings would inherently remove proteases from a wound site upon their removal. However, the claims do not simply state the method for applying and removal of the bandages for protease removal from the wound site. The claims further state a step of 'determining' a protease to be removed and 'selecting' a particular protein-containing fibrous component for removal of the protease. It is noted that no particular rules/laws were found which state that a mental step in a claim is not given patentable weight, and therefore the 'determination step', although purely mental in the Examiner's opinion, was examined as a real step in the method. No reference can be found in the art where proteases were removed from wound sites with any type of wound dressing/material/wool/silk and so-forth. Therefore, no motivation is found for 'determining' a protease to be removed from a wound site and 'selecting' a particular protein-containing fibrous component; i.e., silk or wool bandages/dressings for removing a protease from a wound site.
